

The European Union and its Arctic endeavour

EU-Arctic policy-making from a critical geopolitical perspective

why space and geography matters:
the construction of space determines foreign policy behaviour and the development of a related policy toolkit

preliminary findings

Different types of Arctic perceptions and a related step-by-step institutional learning process define the development of the EU’s Arctic policy toolkit. HOWEVER one essential political question remains:

“What does the Arctic actually mean for the European Union?”

An EXACT Marie Curie ITN Research Fellow

S	University of Cologne	The European Union’s gateways to the Arctic , co-authored (under review: European Foreign Affairs Review, forthcoming)	P t	October 2011 - March 2012	The Arctic and New Technologies , Arctic Yearbook 2013, co-authored (under review)	a a	TEPSA, Trans European Policy Studies Association	The Maritime Dimension of CSDP: Geostrategic Maritime Challenges and their Implications for the European Union , Study for EP SEDE Subcommittee, co-authored (2012)	p g	April 2012 - September 2012	The EU as a shipping actor in the Arctic , SWP Working Paper, co-authored (2012)	e
e	University of Cologne - University of Edinburgh	The future of Arctic shipping along the Transpolar Sea Route , Arctic Yearbook 2012, co-authored (2012)	r
s	October 2012 - December 2013	From ‘Great Wall’ to ‘Great White North’: Explaining China’s politics in the Arctic , Long Post European Geostrategy, co-authored (2012)	s
S		The future of Arctic shipping , Port Technology International, co-authored (2012)

Media Citations: The Economist, Printed Edition, September 1st, 2012; Al Jaazera, May 15th, 2013 - publications of several articles and op-eds at The Arctic Institute

Private effort: Analyst at The Arctic Institute
www.thearcticinstitute.org

The Arctic Institute | Center for Circumpolar Security Studies

Andreas Raspotnik
University of Cologne - University of Edinburgh andreas.raspotnik@uni-koeln.de

